LINDA JANE WILSON recently became Mrs. Kevin Robert Dougherty in the Chapel at the Naval Postgraduate School in Monterey.

Linda Jane Wilson weds Sacramento man

Fall was reflected in the decor at the Protestant Chapel of the Naval Postgraduate School for the November nuptials of Linda Jane Wilson and Kevin Robert Dougherty. The Rev. Donald B. Johnson of the Carmel Valley Community Chapel officiated.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacques H. Wilson, of Rancho Road in Carmel Valley, are the parents of the bride. She graduated from Carmel High School and attended Sacramento City College.

She wore a long-sleeved Empire-style gown with a floor-length linen crash skirt. The white cotton lace bodice matched the lace of her veil. The bridal bouquet was of miniature white pompon chrysanthemums with baby's breath and tiny orange-coral rosebuds.

The groom, a graduate of Sacramento City College, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert R. Dougherty, of Sacramento. He wore an off-white tuxedo trimmed in brown with a tan shirt.

Members of the wedding party included the maid of honor, Cynthia Harlander, childhood friend of the bride and a former Valley resident who now makes her home in Lafayette. Her long gown was a sleeveless peach flower-sprigged print with matching cape. She carried a nosegay of orange and white carnations with baby's breath.

Bridesmaids were the bride's cousins, Anne Wilson, of Mill Valley, and Wendy Klopp, of Sacramento. Their gowns and bouquets matched the maid of honor.

The bride's twin sisters, Susan and Cynthia Wilson of Carmel Valley, served as junior bridesmaids. They were gowned in orange crepe with flowing sleeves and carried matching bouquets.

The groom's attendants selected light brown tuxedos trimmed in a deeper brown with tan shirts. Jeffery Little of Missoula, Mont., was the best man. Ushers included the groom's brother, Michael Benoist, of Sacramento; the bride's brother, Jacques H. Wilson, of Carmel Valley; the groom's cousin, Christopher Horn, of Denver, Colo.; and Albert Sadler, of Sacramento.

A reception followed in the La Novia Room of the Officers and Faculty Club of the Naval Postgraduate School in Monterey. A wedding cake of white trimmed in orange and topped with pale orange bells was served to the guests by Mrs. Oliver W. Bearor, of Sacramento, a friend of the bride's family.

The bride and groom drank the traditional toast from a German bride's cup, a family heirloom belonging to the bride's parents. They also observed an old frontier custom -- "jump over the broomstick" -- with a gaily ribboned and flower-bedecked new broom provided for the rites.

Following a wedding trip to Yosemite and Southern California, the newlyweds will make their first home in Sacramento.

High school band celebrates at dinner

The traditional Christmas "Band-quet" for members of the Carmel High School band and their families was hosted last week at All Saints' Episcopal Church in Carmel.

Band director Henry Avila and his wife were in charge of the dinner party, which was followed by a band Christmas concert and gift exchange.

Among the special guests were Betty Bell of the school board and Paul Sheckler, vice-principal at Carmel High School.

Block letters, awarded on a participation point system, were presented at mid-concert by Avila to Troy Davis, Gary Condren, Caroline Erner, Laura Steinmetz, Beth Copsey, Garth Hattan, Kevin Criddle, Mike Pugh, Barrie Roberts and Leanne Steinmetz.

The "ho, ho, ho's" of the jolly old elf who visited members of the Carmel Valley Lions and their wives at the annual Christmas party last week bore a marked resemblance to the "ho, ho, ho's" of Peter Del Fino, according to some of the guests who enjoyed the potluck, gift exchange and pretty holiday decorations created by Mrs. Frank Catalano.

State study reports:

New wells in lower Valley may be needed next year

By JIM BARRETT

ADDITIONAL WELLS in the lower Carmel Valley will be needed to supply Monterey Peninsula water users if the drought continues, the State Water Resources Department said in a report issued Monday.

No new limit was suggested on the "safe yield" of the aquifer, the underground water reservoir along the Carmel River, however. In a 1974 study, the state department established the limit at 15,000 acre-feet a year. The updated study said, however, an estimated 20,000 acre-feet lies in the aquifer.

Water concentrations are heaviest in the western or lower Valley, nearest to Carmel Bay, the brief, two-page report said.

"The report concludes what most everybody thought," remarked County Supervisor Sam Farr, who represents the Carmel area. "There is a lot of water around La Canada (golf courses) and the water is high in iron content."

Most wells in the lower Valley are privately owned, he said. California-American Water Co., with yield from its wells diminished farther up the Valley, has signed a contract to buy water pumped from wells owned by Nick Lombardo, the golf course owner, Farr said. Water from many private wells in the Valley has been used principally for irrigation in the past.

"If water from the wells there is used for domestic purposes, that will present a conflict for the Carmel Sanitary District. One of the alternatives the district has considered for recycling wastewater is to use treated effluent to recharge the aquifer," said Farr. The concept has been considered because the wastewater would be cleansed as it sinks to the aquifer. Farr said such recycling probably would not be permitted by health authorities.

THE OTHER problem is that if more wells are put in that lower Valley area, there is an increased threat of seawater intrusion," said Farr.

Intrusion could contaminate groundwater in the area. The report said groundwater levels are well above sea level and it minimized the threat of intrusion. The underground table

Cal-Am appeals delayed until Jan. 17

Hearings on two appeals aimed at having well-drilling restrictions lifted at a pair of Carmel Valley wells were postponed last week by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

The appeals involve the Scarlett and Stanton Wells.

The hearings were rescheduled for Tuesday, Jan. 17, at 3:30 p.m. at the county building in Salinas.

The California-American Water Co. asked for the delay. The hearings had been scheduled for Dec. 13.

The water utility seeks to remove a requirement that riverbanks within 2,100 feet of the wells be irrigated. When permits were granted for the wells in August and October, the irrigation requirement was stipulated in the permits. The firm claims the requirements are inconsistent with the terms of the permits on its other wells in Carmel Valley.

Irrigation would keep riverbank vegetation alive and minimize erosion along the banks, the County Planning Commission agreed when it granted the permits earlier this year.

was 10 to 47 feet above sea level during the past summer along the crucial five-mile stretch of Valley nearest Carmel Bay. The reported levels had dropped three to 16 feet below those recorded by the department in 1973.

Findings in the report were based on the drilling records from 110 wells along the Valley aquifer, said Carl L. Stetson, district chief for the Water Resources Department.

Stetson wrote in his conclusions to the report, "The water needs of California-American's service area can be met in 1978 if the drought continues, provided that the present water rationing plan continues in effect, that additional wells are located downstream from the present well field in Carmel Valley and that current production from Seaside wells is maintained."

The department reported that the Seaside wells could continue to yield as much water as they did in 1977, if not more.

THE REPORT was sought by the Zone 11 Water Advisory Board and the Monterey Peninsula Water Management Agency. The two boards have scheduled a meeting on Monday, Jan. 9, to discuss the Water Resources Department report, according to Manuel de Maria, chairman for the Zone 11 panel.

He said the advisory panel probably would recommend that more wells be allowed in the west end of the Valley in view of the report's findings.

Bartender's Yule serenade

CHRISTMAS CHEER finds unusual outlets. Take Frank Marseguerra, the bartender at the Hog's Breath Inn in Carmel and a Valley resident. He has been amusing those who bend an elbow by playing carols on wine glasses. On his 11-glass, and thus 11-note, glass harmonica, Frank has sounded out "Jingle Bells," "Silent Night" and "Joy to the World." He adds varying amounts of water to each glass, which range from a full-size wine glass to a petite sherry glass. Wetting his index finger, Frank rubs the glass rims and produces — in most cases — sonorous notes for the carols. "It's like a kid's toy. You just sound it out," he says. By the way, Frank, 29, is a professional musician. He plays guitar at the Carmel Holiday Inn and at the Buckeye restaurant. (George T. C. Smith photo)

Padres the victors in their own tournament

By JAY POSNER

AFTER WINNING their own tournament for only the third time in 31 years, the Carmel varsity basketball team will take the week off before going to San Jose to play in the San Jose Invitational Tournament that starts next Wednesday.

The Padres claimed the local championship by winning three games in a row, the final game a 39-38 victory over Monterey, the second time in two weeks that Carmel defeated Monterey by one point.

In that final game, the Padres were led by tournament MVP John Frincke who scored 18 points, 12 in the second half. The Padres, now 7-2, led 18-14 at the half as Dave Stevenson scored six of his eight points. In the third quarter, the Padres jumped out to a 22-14 lead only to see the Treadlores come back to tie the game at 28-28 after three periods. With one minute left in the game and the score tied at 36, Monterey turned the ball over to the Padres.

Carmel worked for the last shot and with eight seconds left, the shot missed, but Monterey's Keith Walker, who scored 17 points, fouled Tom Frincke. Frincke, who had 11 points, made both free throws to give the Padres a 38-36 lead with six seconds left. The Monterey inbound pass was stolen by John Lucido who was fouled. Lucido sank one free throw, his only point of the night, to give Carmel a 39-36 lead with one second left. Monterey called time, and in an instant replay of a week ago, Padre coach Joe Feldeisen had all his men stand at halfcourt to avoid the three-point play. Monterey inbounded to Ken Gordon who sank a shot at the buzzer, but Carmel had its championship.

ON FRIDAY night, the Padres overpowered Pacific Grove, 68-48. The game was close for three quarters, but the Breakers ran out of gas in the fourth stanza as Carmel outscored Pacific Grove 20-11. The Padres led by only four, 38-34, midway through the third period, but Tom Frincke and Dave Stevenson combined for five points in less than a minute to put the game away. John Frincke had 21 points to pace Carmel while Tom Frincke had 14 and Dave Stevenson, who made the all-tournament team, added 12 points.

IN FIRST-round action, Carmel defeated Westmont High School of San Jose, 70-62, in a game that was much closer than the score indicates.

Will Wilkinson, a six-foot, three-inch senior who didn't start the game, led the Padres with 29 points and 18 rebounds. Westmont, which trailed 34-22 at halftime and 53-45 after three quarters, fought back to 57-55 with 4:30 left in the game. However, Wilkinson scored eight points in just over a minute to give Carmel a 68-60 lead and the victory. John Frincke, who averaged 18 points a game through the tourney, had 15 points and Tom Frincke added eight.

Spalding Pro-am

Tuesday

The $90,000 Spalding Invitational Pro-Am golf championship opens Tuesday at three Monterey Peninsula golf courses, including one of the two at Rancho Canada.

Among the field of 78 professionals and 78 three-man amateur teams will be Al Geiberger, George Archer, Rod Funseth, Forrest Fezler and Roger Maltbie.

The four-day pro-am precedes the opening of the new PGA tour each year.

Play will be over the Laguna Seca Golf Ranch, Rancho Canada-East and the Corral de Tierra Golf and Country Club.

The 78 three-man amateur teams will play the first three rounds Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, then drop out for the final round when the club and touring professionals vie alone at Laguna Seca for the $90,000 purse.

Sponsored by Spalding, a giant in the golf industry, and the Monterey Kiwanis Club, the tournament donates all proceeds from ticket sales to charity. The entire $8 season ticket is tax deductible because the money will go to charity, said Tournament Chairman Howard Braunstein of the Kiwanis Club.

Toy report: It is 'Slime' for Christmas

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

LOOK OUT before you reach into your Christmas stocking Sunday. It could be filled with green slime.

An oozing green product made by Mattel Toys called "Slime" could be Carmel's most popular stocking-stuffer, the word is from Peninsula merchants.

The slippery stuff sells like hotcakes at $1.49.

"I didn't want to stock the stuff, but everyone kept asking for it. In the past two days, I've sold two dozen," said one toy store manager from the Carmel area.

The can it comes in is full of warnings. The slime sticks to rugs. It tangles the hair. And even dry cleaning will not remove the stains it makes.

If the green glop doesn't sound crazy enough, how about handing your child a $15 piece of paper Christmas morning?

Many of you will do just that and your kids will love you for it.

The piece of paper is a gift certificate for a doll set six months away from mass production. It will feature the Star Wars characters from the record-breaking movie.

"IMAGINE SELLING a product before it is manufactured," said an amazed Jim Holland, owner of the Wooden Horse, on Dolores and Seventh.

Kenner Toys has locked up all production rights. Even the firm that sells the certificates has run out of certificates, Holland added.

"Most of the parents don't even know what they are buying. The certificate says 'Star Wars' on it, so they just buy them," Holland said.

If you are looking for a last-minute way to stretch your Christmas dollar, you might want to investigate another Kenner creation for $14.99.

"Stretch Armstrong" looks like Mr. America, but his rubber body pulls like taffy. This foot-long rubber doll can stretch four feet if you tug hard enough.

But don't tug on the "Six Million Dollar Man" doll. Even he has his limits. The television wonderman sells for $11.88.

NOT ALL THE television stars are making waves in toyland.

The Farrah Fawcett-Majors doll is a flop. The likeness of the former star of Charlie's Angels is such a turkey that one store has knocked $3 off the price.

The same goes for Donny and Marie Osmond dolls.

The third most popular adult hobby in the country has caught the Christmas fancy of many Carmel residents, according to one toy store owner.

Collectors of miniatures already have grabbed up almost all the three-foot-high, wooden Victorian dollhouses at the Wooden Horse.

You can pick one up for $50 to $250. You also can fill up the three stories and nine rooms in some of the houses with miniature decorations, such as a handmade, six-inch piano for $60.

Why are miniature creations so popular? There are plenty of adult collectors, said Holland, who thinks it has a lot to do with nostalgia.

Do-it-yourselfism is a blossoming craze at another Carmel toy store. Paint Your Own T-Shirts (shirt and paint included for $6) is the Christmas craze at Thinker Toys in Carmel Plaza.

The kit is like a paint-by-number set, except the backdrop is a shirt instead of a canvas, according to Billie Rookaird, a store manager.

"All the toys are selling better this year," said one toy man.

"I've been away for just two days," he said, pointing to the Christmas-rush disarray. "You'd have thought Santa himself was here."

HOW TO PLAY with "Slime" is demonstrated by Vanessa Share, 9, of Big Sur. Vanessa said she comes to Carmel to do all her Christmas shopping. A can of the newest toy rage costs $1.49.

We goofed!

Boy are we embarrassed. In the "Outlook" last week, two photographs of Berwick Manor, recently added to the Federal Register of Historical Sites, were printed as negatives. We want to accentuate the positive and apologize for the error by rerunning the photos correctly.

THIS OVERALL view of the historical Berwick Manor shows the reservoir and irrigated garden which led to the development of the famous Berwick pears. The Berwick family is shown in the foreground.

THE BERWICK MANOR, a century-old, 26-acre farm in Carmel Valley, has been placed on the national register of historic homes by a presidential advisory committee. Edward Berwick, renowned statesman and farmer, is

Plays for children in Monterey

The Magic Carpet, a children's theater troupe, will present five performances of A Christmas Special at the Monterey Conference Center, 1 Portola Plaza, Monterey, Thursday-Saturday, Dec. 22-24.

Performances are scheduled at 7 and 9 p.m. Thursday and Friday and 7 p.m. Saturday.

Tickets, at $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for children under 12, are available at Thinker Toys in Carmel Plaza, Carmel; the Flower Shoppe, Mark Thomas Drive, Monterey; the Carmel Valley Market in Carmel Valley Village; and Marotta's on Alvarado St. in Monterey. Tickets will also be available at the door.

The gingerbread house caper

GERMAN LANGUAGE instructor Royce Tooker applies the confected caulking that holds the gingerbread house together. Watching the process is Laura Mayo.

Language, cooking come together for these local teens

It might be hard to see the connection between the cooking and German language classes at the Carmel Middle School, but teachers Karen Pfeiffer and Royce Tooker found one and used it when two cooking classes and three German classes worked together for a week building the traditional German gingerbread houses for the Christmas season.

Tooker's recipe includes ginger, but the German term for this tasty holiday tidbit is "hexenhauschen," or little witch's house. The real flavor, however, comes from the major ingredient, honey.

Mrs. Pfeiffer's cooking classes were exposed to a new kind of holiday baking. They had to plan their project and budget their time with more care than usual and at the same time learn to share their kitchen with other students who had never been in a kitchen before. The language students used the gingerbread making as a stepping stone to the German fairy tale "Hansel and Gretel." First-year students hear the story in English with an introduction to German vocabulary. Advanced students hear the story in German and discuss the recipe, introducing them to ingredients used in another culture.

Upon completion, the 27 gingerbread houses were displayed in the school library and prizes were awarded for the most appealing houses as determined by a vote of the student body. Then the creations were delivered by the students themselves and the teachers to convalescent and nursing homes in the Carmel area to be enjoyed during the Christmas season.

For the sake of tradition, on the last day of school, one house per class was eaten during the Christmas festivities.

THE FINISHED product. A gingerbread house with jellybean boulders and a roof shingled with candy corn.

The young mare snorted nervously when the sky began falling. She was not sure what was happening. She had seen something like this—fog, heavy fog, Scotch mists—that hung in the air until all the leaves dripped. There had even been an occasion or two when all the sky dripped, a pitter-patter of water falling everywhere.

But in all her three years of life, the filly had seen nothing like this. Because she had been born and raised in California she thought she had seen everything. She had seen horse trailers and freeways, horse shows and hang gliders, mosquitoes and their big relatives, motorcycles. But she hadn't seen rain.

Along with the rain came more cold than the filly had ever experienced. Regular cold was frosty; a filly with a thick, fuzzy coat could take frost easily. (Horsehair doesn't keep a horse warm, you know. What it does is trap thousands and millions of tiny pockets of air. Trapped air is excellent insulation; it really keeps body heat in.)

But wet cold called for different tactics. The young horse put her head and tail down and stood very still as her mother had taught her to do. "This is Protective Position No. 1," her mother had instructed. "In this Position, wind and snow slip around you, rain slides off your back, and body heat is trapped along the under surfaces where you are most vulnerable. Also, it is a submissive position and other horses will leave you alone. That's a good thing as this Protective Position only works if you HOLD STILL."

So the filly stood very still although it was hard for a young horse to do. The top guard hairs of her coat arranged themselves into a shingled roof and the rain streamed off her hips, flanks and shoulders.

She would rather be in one of the other Protective Positions, preferably one which left her free to move around. For instance, Protective Position No. 3A, "Half-Seen-Possible-Terror," called for her to stretch upwards in every fiber of her body...head up, tail up, up on tip toes, and to trot toward the menace in slow high steps ready for fight or flight. This was the filly's favorite Protective Position and she practiced it at every opportunity.

Daylight did not come in the usual way. Immobilized in Protective Position No. 1, the filly was barely aware that she could now see the rain as well as feel it. She could also see rivers of water coursing through her pasture, leaping down the hillside with cascades and waterfalls, and cutting miniature canyons she would have to jump over.

"QUACK, QUACK, QUACK!"

Always before, daylight had meant the end of whatever night problems had arisen. Broken fences, raccoons, empty water tubs, slipped horseblankets, fouled hay — just wait until morning. At breakfast time, someone will make it all right. But the sounds of hay being thrown in the feeder did not turn off the falling sky. Disdainfully, the filly began to pick her way from the hillside trees toward the manger.

Horrors! Her hooves were wet. Although she had carefully avoided stepping in any of the water circles which now occupied the spaces where the holes in the pasture used to be, her dainty hooves were definitely wet. Worse was to come. A small lake filled the entire passage way between the wide part of the pasture and the place where the mangers were. It was too wide to jump. Its edges were transparent but its bottom was invisible; no one could step into that!

She dithered at the edge. Sniffed the water and drank a mouthful. Faugh! What useless stuff! She set herself to walk a four-inch-wide ledge along the right-hand fence. At each step her hooves mashed the ledge into ooze; wire scraped her right side. "Hurry up and get it over with!" she urged herself, making an uncoordinated leap for the far shore.

Across the puddle, the filly shook herself as much to throw off the fear as to fluff her matting hair. But shaking herself turned out to be a mistake. Suddenly rain was penetrating between the guard hairs. Her coat began to curl into wet swaths with pink skin showing between them. Wet to the skin, lost body heat began to rise as steam above her back.

Fortunately, she had reached a familiar rolling place. She lowered herself into the mud and vigorously scrubbed her back into the ground. Wet or dry, a good roll puts all the hairs back where they belong. The filly was also convinced that the coating of mud itself offered some protection against loss of body heat.

Thoroughly part of the elements, she now did not hesitate at the lake surrounding the manger. Splash, splash, squish squash, in she waded. Stand in water to eat? Wild horses graze in swamps or browse on river reeds. For food, she would become a moose if necessary.

Moose filly levered her long nose under the dry hay and tossed most of it into the water. Wet hay had a new and different taste. Good. Furthermore, grazing position was enough like Protective Position No. 1 to make dining comfortable.

Water from the sky was new and different and took some getting used to, decided the filly. But it was definitely Good.

Singing tree in Pacific Grove

The Singing Christmas Tree, a Yuletide tradition in Pacific Grove, will be presented Thursday and Friday, Dec. 22-23, at Pine and Grand Aves. It is sponsored by the Assembly of God Church of Pacific Grove.

The tree is actually a complex system of scaffolds on which members of a 60-voice mixed choir arrange themselves to serenade listeners on the street below. The five-tier structure was designed by a professional architect for the first performance and is stored for use year after year.

The structure is masked with freshly cut pine boughs; lights and a sound system are wired onto the back. Singers climb to their places on the walkways which form the tree's boughs by way of ladders hidden from the audience.

Performances each evening run for approximately one hour from 8:30 to 9:30 p.m. The event is free and everyone is invited to attend.

Reunion of Hidden Valley artists

The 15th annual Hidden Valley Holiday Reunion Concert sponsored by Hidden Valley Music Seminars has been scheduled for Wednesday, Dec. 28, at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel. The concert begins at 8 p.m. Tickets are $3.

Musicians from all over the country who have studied at Hidden Valley since its inception in 1963 will form the 75-piece orchestra and 45-member chorale. The orchestra will play Planets by Holst and the chorale will sing Ceremony of Carols by Britten. The concert will be directed by John Waddell and Michael Zearott.

The Hidden Valley campus in Carmel Valley Village is presently the scene of rehearsals and preparations for the opening of the 1978 opera season with Puccini's opera Madama Butterfly Friday, Jan. 6.

The 17 members of the resident Opera Ensemble will perform at a special New Year's Eve Gala at Hidden Valley Saturday, Dec. 31. A champagne buffet and dancing are also planned.

The production of Madama Butterfly will be the first of three full-length operas to be staged at Hidden Valley this year. The others will be The Elixir of Love and Rigoletto.

Season tickets for the Opera Ensemble program are still available, as are a limited number of reservations for the New Year's Eve party. New Year's Eve tickets are $50 a couple.

For reservations or more information, phone 659-3115.

Yule log rite at Highlands Inn

The ceremony of the laying of the Yule Log will be performed as part of Scottish Merry Month at Highlands Inn, Carmel. The event begins at 9 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 24, and will conclude with a party and dancing. The public is welcome; there is no charge.

The evening begins with a traditional search for a Yule Log conducted by the Inn's bellmen and crew, who will make a mock search through the woods accompanied by the Highland Pipers.

The Yule Log will be carried into the Inn's lobby and laid on the massive stone hearth. Red wine will be poured over it to symbolize the birth of the sun and the log will be lighted with the ashes of last year's Yule Log to symbolize the passing of the Winter Solstice.

Highlands Inn is approximately four miles south of Carmel on Highway 1. For further information, phone 624-3801.

Serigraphs on display at gallery in Pacific Grove

A special Christmas exhibit of serigraphs by Beva Farmer entitled The Benedicte Series is on display at the Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History, 165 Forest Ave., Pacific Grove. The exhibit will remain on view until Jan. 8.

Mrs. Farmer grew up on the Monterey Peninsula, attended Pacific Grove and Carmel schools and later majored in philosophy at UC Berkeley. She is best known as a teacher of italic writing which she mastered after years of intensive study of illuminated manuscripts.

More recently she has experimented with serigraphy using her design skills with bold color. The exhibit is of works suggested by the song o creation written in the third chapter of the Book of Daniel which was shouted out by three young Jewish boys, Shadrach, Meshach and Abed-nego.

Museum hours are 10 a.m.-5 p.m. every day except Monday. For more information, phone 372-4212.

Audubon schedules 'bird count'

The annual Monterey Peninsula Bird Count will be a dawn-to-dark affair Tuesday, Dec. 27. The major bird-watching expedition usually locates several hundred different birds each year.

All interested birders — members or nonmembers of the Audubon Society — are welcome to participate, preferably for a half day or more. Birders need not be professionals. Persons will also be needed to tally.

Those who wish to participate must make arrangements in advance with compiler Bill Reese. For additional information, phone him at 375-2740.

Latino theater group to stage street posada

El Teatro Campesino will present La Pastorela and Las Posadas in the streets of San Juan Bautista Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Dec. 22-24, as part of the Fiesta Navidenas or Christmas season celebrations in the historic mission town 33 miles northeast of the Monterey Peninsula on Highway 101.

The posadas procession begins at 6 p.m. each evening in front of the Mission San Juan Bautista and proceeds to a selected host for the evening with La Pastorela immediately following at approximately 8 p.m. Everyone is welcome to attend the free programs.

Since the early days of Christianity in Spain and England, pastorelas, or shepherds' plays, have depicted the long trek of the first shepherds to the holy site of the Nativity. Franciscan missionaries brought the pastorela to Mexico in the 16th century. In recent years the pastorela has begun to disappear, although until several years ago the traditional pageant was performed every Christmas Eve in hundreds of villages and towns from South America to the American Southwest.

The posadas procession which precedes the play is a re-enactment of the journey of Joseph and Mary to Bethlehem and their search for shelter before the birth of Jesus. The candlelight procession makes its way from the old mission through San Juan Bautista to a preselected place where everyone is finally offered shelter as well as traditional Mexican songs and refreshments.

El Teatro Campesino is a touring theater company based in San Juan Bautista committed to the advancement of Chicano cultural heritage through the arts. The Campesino has won two Los Angeles Drama Critics Circle Awards and an Obie Award.

The Gift of Love
I have a gift I want to give at Christmas time each year.

I want so much to wrap it up but yet I have a fear; they will not understand this gift, this gift of love and cheer.

So I just do the safest thing and buy it at the store, when what I really want to do would mean a whole lot more.

-Andrea Jacobsen, junior
Christmas
Christmas is now a sales pitch, A season only for the rich.

Gimbel's, Macy's, Penney's and Sears, Have competed throughout the years.

Christmas lights come out in October Store and street Santas rarely are sober.

There are thousands of Christmas trees in red, white and blue But green spruce or pine, there are only a few.

Plastic holly with beaded berries Glow in the dark Jesuses, Josephs and Marys.

Neon signs give off a bright glow On white painted sawdust that resembles real snow.

Once upon a yesteryear Everything was real and clear.

Now it seems true to me That Christmas isn't what it used to be.

-Melissa Faia, sophomore
The Day after Christmas
The Christmas cheer has gone away the tree is down — all packed away.

The people walk their frowns acute.

The season's through; they count their loot.
-Kira Heniford, senior

The Child
The child sits with confusion painted on her face.

She tries to understand the world as if it were a maze.

She cannot quite see the things that used to be.

The Christmas trees and stockings are now ever so shocking.

The little girl who sheds a tear looks at Santa without any fear.

The tear was out with no real reason except for the change of what once was a beautiful season...
-Gayle Silverman, junior

Christmas Time
Christmas is a time to be good, So Santa will bring the toys he said he would.

Christmas is a vacation time to ski, And a time to pick out a favored tree.

Christmas is a time to cuddle up by the fire, And think about anything you desire.

Christmas is a time to be merry, And let children dream of the Christmas fairy.

Christmas is a time to reminisce, And think about the people you dearly miss.

Christmas is a time to be happy, And whisper dear things to your pappy.

Christmas is a time to share, And let people know that you care.
-Heidi England, junior

Oakland Ballet to dance 'Nutcracker'

The Oakland Ballet Company will present the delightful Christmastime classic The Nutcracker for two performances at King Hall of the Naval Postgraduate School, Monterey, Tuesday, Dec. 27, at 3 and 8 p.m.

Tchaikovsky's ballet is the story of a little girl named Clara who receives a wondrous nutcracker as a Christmas gift from a mysterious toymaker named Mr. Drosselmeyer. When Clara slips downstairs during the night, she discovers a battle between the mice and toy soldiers and hits the fierce Mouse King on the head to save the life of her beloved nutcracker.

The nutcracker, who has begun to look very much like a prince, bows and invites Clara to the Candy Kingdom as a reward.

There she meets the Sugar Plum Fairy, who, when she hears that Clara has saved the Prince's life, orders a festival in her honor. Everyone comes to the festival — the ribbon candy dancers, wood nymphs, the Spanish dancers, a Turkish magician, Mother Goose, Morning Rose and the sugar flowers of every color — and the celebration concludes with the magical Grand Pas de Deux by the Cavalier Prince and the Sugar Plum Fairy.

The Oakland Ballet production will feature colorful costumes, elaborate sets and a company of 30. A growing Christmas tree, beautiful snowflakes, mice, Arabians, Russians and a garden of roses will add to the magic of the event.

General admission is $4. For tickets, phone 373-5522.

Teacher hosts party for students

A group of residents at Carmel Valley Manor enjoyed the hospitality of one of their teachers Friday. Norbert Kammer, who teaches courses there on human relations, nutrition and problems of aging, invited some of his students to a party at his house, something he does about twice a year.

"I share their space every week," said Kammer, "so I thought it would be nice for them to share mine."

Kammer's students range in age from 80 to 95.

The house at which the party took place, at Lincoln and Third in Carmel, is constructed from bits of various residences that were once the Carmel Foundation. It is completely handbuilt, said Kammer.

Back-to-land lecture Saturday

Helen and Scott Nearing, whose book Living the Good Life has become an underground classic among pioneers in the back-to-the-land movement, will present a lecture entitled Living Sanely and Simply in a Troubled World Saturday, Dec. 23, 8 p.m. at the Pacific Grove Art Center, 568 Lighthouse Ave., Pacific Grove. Everyone is welcome to attend the free program sponsored by the Unitarian Church.

The Nearings will also autograph copies of their books Friday, Dec. 23, noon-2 p.m. at the Thunderbird Bookstore in the Barnyard, Highway 1 and Rio Rd., Carmel.

Dr. Nearing, now 94 years old, is still in excellent health. He and his wife live on a simple vegetarian diet, raising most of their own food on their Maine farm. They have just completed a brief lecture tour in India and will speak in Marin and Sonoma Counties and in San Francisco during their annual tour.

Accidents come with the holidays. For the Monterey Peninsula, that means more blood than usual is required by local hospitals.

The Red Cross Carmel Chapter is sponsoring a Holiday Blood-Giving drive Friday at the Carmel Holiday Inn, Rio Road and Highway 1, from 10 a.m. until 2:30 p.m.

Luncheon will be served to all donors at no charge.

Santa Claus will visit and sitters will be available to donors.

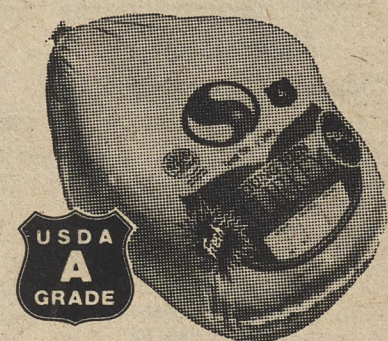

Those not able to give blood are requested to donate cookies for the blood donors.
